High Performance or Commercial Use

Whilst we stand by the fantastic quality of our printed and woven fabrics, they are not produced to adhere to the various standards and strict regulations surrounding contract furnishings.

Our fabrics are not FR treated and rub tests vary from 5,000 – 30,000 rubs (Martindale tested). The useable width and vertical repeat for each fabric can be found on our website and we are here to help with any questions you might have about compositions/technical details.

Each project is different, and regulations vary between countries. Therefore, if fabric has been specified for commercial use, we recommend buying 1 metre / 1 yard to issue for testing, prior to treatment and before proceeding with the order.

United Kingdom

If the fabric is made up of 75%+ natural fibres, it can be interlined to conform with FR regulations. If synthetic fibres make up over 25% of the fabric, it will need to be FR treated.

Other treatments for domestic use include scotch guarding and water-resistant treatments to protect the fabric. Please do get in touch with specialists in these fields for further advice. We would be happy to recommend industry names.

For commercial use, fabrics can be Crib 5 treated to adhere to commercial regulations.

Non-UK

Regulations differ between countries. We therefore recommend purchasing 1 metre / 1 yard of our fabric to issue for testing, prior to treatment.

Guy Goodfellow Collection makes no claim as to the fire-retardant level of its fabrics and wallpapers. Our goods are therefore treated entirely at the customer's own risk. Whilst we are happy to recommend treatment houses, we will not accept any claim made for changes in appearance or handle.
